Nirav Dalal: After an impressive win in Madison and a jump to #3 in the polls, the Lions have the nation's attention. After a horrid start to the season and a loss to Toledo, the Wolverines have the nation's attention for negative reasons. Many have drawn parallels between this Lions squad to the one from 2005. The parallels continue with this game. Penn State came into the Michigan game that year undefeated and playing with tremendous confidence. Michigan, on the other hand, was 3-3 and was coming off of a loss to Minnesota. The Lions let the Wolverines hang around and, thanks to a little politicking from Coach Carr, the Blue and Maize pulled off an upset with 1 second left on the clock. But, this is a different Wolverine team and this is clearly a different Lion team.

Mark Harrington: Well on paper, this sure seems like advantage Penn State; an undefeated PSU squad versus a reeling two-win U-M team, home field advantage and a 24-point Vegas vote in favor of the Lions. However, PSU has to be careful and focused. Michigan has a lot to gain in this one – a 10 game winning streak, bragging rights and the title of “giant killer.” You can bet Michigan is going to come out swinging in this one.

Other Big Games This Weekend:

ND: After a huge, emotional win against Oklahoma, Texas has to come back down to Earth and focus on a tough match-up against Missouri. Chase Daniel is coming off of a tough loss to the surprising Oklahoma State Cowboys. Missouri could quickly get back into the National Title picture by knocking off the No. 1 team in the country. Meanwhile, the Horns have a tough row to hoe but appear to have the offense and leadership to navigate this challenging schedule.

MH: To stay in the Big 12, No. 4 Oklahoma, still licking its Red River wounds, has to host No. 16 Kansas. The Jayhawks are looking to show they are now a legitimate power in the conference and what better way than to push down the Sooners who are coming off an emotional loss?

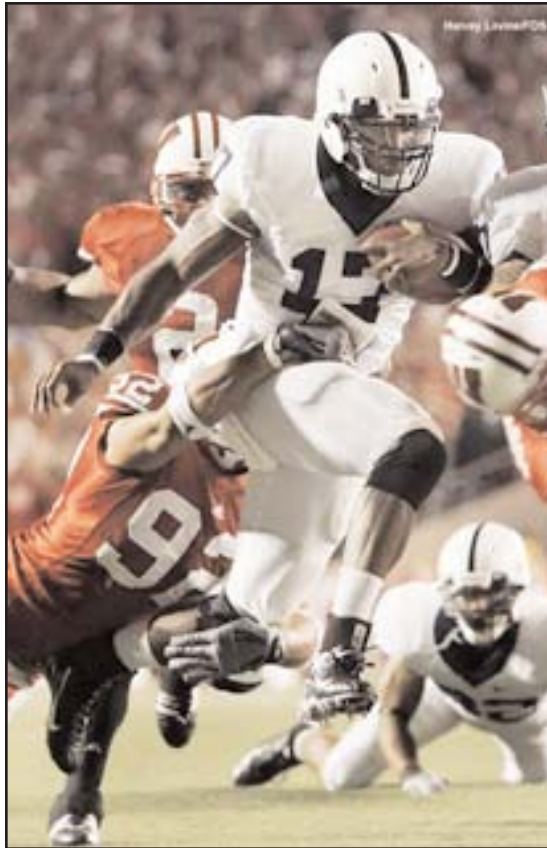

Upset Special:

ND: The Big Ten is starting to fall on its face with a total lack of competition for the top spot. After Wisconsin's implosion, it appears that Michigan State is the only other team that can compete with Ohio State and Penn State. The Spartans can prove their worthiness with a good showing against the Buckeyes this weekend. I am still not convinced that the Buckeyes are good enough for that top spot. Pryor struggled against Purdue and the offensive line is starting to resemble a sieve. I like the Spartans to pound the ball in this one and to force Terrelle Pryor into some bad decisions.

MH: I am with you on thinking the Spartans can upset the Buckeyes. Word out of Columbus is a quarterback controversy may be brewing, as Pryor has his issues and some players are asking why Todd Boeckman, who led OSU to the title game, is on the bench. OSU could not muster an offensive touchdown against Purdue and the pressure seems to be mounting on the Scarlet and Gray.

Offense:

ND: The Lions are coming off of a good offensive effort against the Badgers. Though the passing game was clicking, the running game was not nearly as effective as it has been in weeks past. But, much of that was a result of the Badgers' strength up front and sneaking an extra man into the box. Despite that, Daryll Clark and Evan Royster had a solid day running the ball. As inept as the Wolverines have been on offense, the defense has not been nearly as atrocious. Michigan is only giving up 102.5 yards per game on the ground. They only yielded 158 yards to the Badgers in their stunning comeback. The Wolverines are anchored by Brandon Graham, who is expected to play this weekend. Obi Eze has been the other playmaker to watch. The “Mike” linebacker has tallied 56 tackles with 6 TFLs. The offensive line did a great job of pushing the Badger defensive line out of the way and then getting a hat on the linebackers. They will need to exhibit that same quality against the Wolverines if Royster is to have a good game. The key to the running game is to stick with it even though the Lions don't get the huge chunks of yardage that they have grown accustomed to.

In the passing game, Clark has been masterful. He has done an excellent job working his progressions and then delivering the football. What has impressed me the most his ability to make corrections during the game. He was making some bad throws against Wisconsin early, but he settled down and started to deliver the ball right on the money. Coming into this season, the focus was to get the ball to the playmakers so that they could use their legs to advance the ball. That is precisely what has happened this season. Clark is throwing the ball at the right spot at the right time and that has allowed Jordan Norwood, Deon Butler, and Derrick Williams to run after the catch. That trend should continue this week. The Wolverines are giving up 241 yards per game (94th in the nation) so Clark should be able to bomb away.

The Lions have shown tremendous balance this season but I think they will be a little more pass heavy in this game because the Wolverines are a bit stronger against the run and are quite weak against the pass. Michigan has a decent defense but the longer they're on the field, the more plays the Lions will be able to make. And, considering how bad the Wolverine offense is, the defense better get ready for a long, long day.

MH: I like what the coaches did with the offense against Wisconsin. While most fans were expecting another "close up the playbook" performance, PSU came out with a 20-yard pass across the middle to Brett Brackett and tried to hit Williams deep. That told me the Lions were coming out with an aggressive attitude in Camp Randall. It also told me there's a direct correlation between Joe Paterno's big game offensive planning and the confidence he has in his quarterback.

The offensive line managed the trenches well against the Badgers and although Royster did not have a huge game, he had some key pickups despite UW's eight men in the box. Clark spread the ball around well, hitting a variety of targets and assembling several key drives. I would like to see Penn State come out strong in the first quarter of a game, but they have proven once the second quarter comes they can put points on the board.

Michigan's defense is quick and aggressive and will likely apply a good amount of pressure on Clark. Teams, like Illinois, have been able to pick U-M's blitzing, but I think we'll see some disguises to throw off the offensive line, so Clark will have to work with Shipley and company to shift the protection over and make sharp, quick decisions.

Toledo managed to get their passing game rolling, so it will be interesting to see what kind of opportunities the PSU wideouts create. Brackett is out with a concussion, so, as one observer explained, "the veterans will have to step up." I expect we'll see a lot of intermediate passes, but I also think that if U-M pulls things in we'll see Clark go deep on a route to Butler, Williams or Norwood to spread things back out.

Defense:

ND: Some have categorized the Lions' defense as "no name" because it lacks some of the star power that Linebacker U. has grown accustomed to in recent years. But, Aaron Maybin and Navorro Bowman are quickly changing that. Maybin, last week's Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week, is becoming a dominant force on the defensive line. His speed and tenacity have been wreaking havoc all season. The area he has really improved is his ability to stop the run and to rush the passer from the inside rather than blow past tackles from the outside. Bowman, on the other hand, has been running all over the place and has been sticking his nose into running lanes or chasing down runners from behind the line of scrimmage.

This week, they face an offense that is completely lost. The question of who they will be chasing is still up in the air. Sophomore quarterback Steven Threet has missed some time to a nasty bruise. We'll see if he plays but I expect that he will. Threet gives the Wolverines some semblance of a running attack. He doesn't have the mobility of Juice Williams, but he will run on draw plays and out of the decide option. The Lions have been working on protecting these types of lanes in practice and having faced Curtis Painter, a similar type of runner, is a huge advantage.

The other runner, Sam McGuffie, is really suffering from a bad offensive line. If he had some running lanes, he would probably be noted as one of the better running backs in the conference. He's a physical back that has some really good wheels. He's also a threat as a receiver so the Lions will need to stick with him on the play action.

Threet has some options at wide receiver with Greg Matthews and Martavious Odoms. But, the issue has been time. Threet isn't getting sacked a ton (only eight times this season) but he is getting hurried on seemingly every down. And, when he is not hurried, he is not throwing the ball very accurately. He's only completing 50% of his passes. Rich Rodriguez must be pulling his hair out because his scheme is built on an accurate passer getting the ball to players in space.

The Lions should have a field day against this offense. I look for Bradley to only rush four and drop seven into coverage in the hopes of picking off passes. The front four should get plenty of pressure on Threet or Nick Sheridan so there should be some forced throws. I don't see this Wolverine offense scoring very often against a stout Lion defense.

MH: Penn State appears to be adopting the approach they took with Painter and Purdue, expecting Threet to pose a dual-threat with the ability to hit the open under route if the pressure goes high on an outside rush. Threet is not Juice Williams, but he can move and create opportunities. Penn State needs to pressure the pocket and force him to rush his progression and passes.

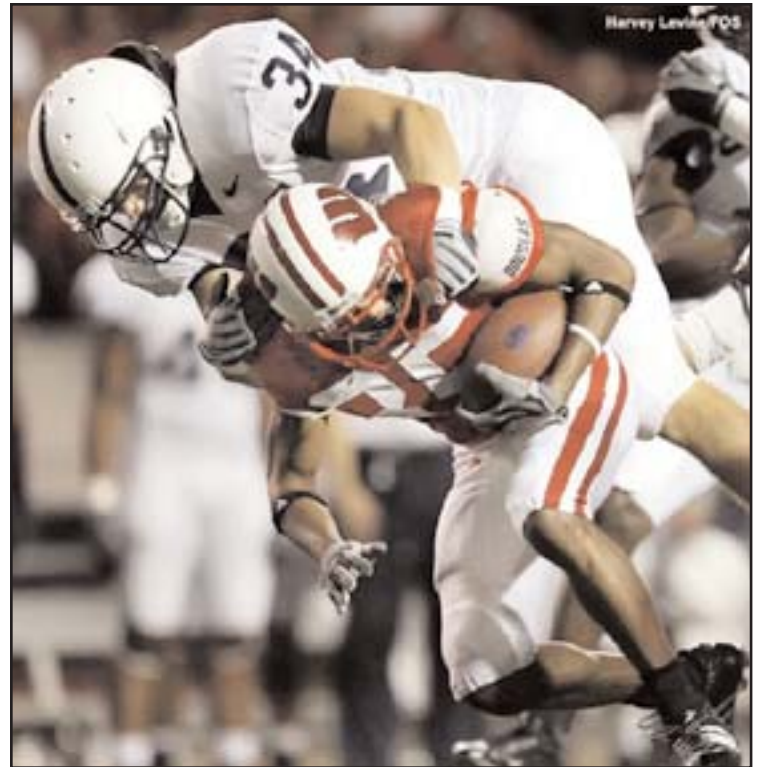

Watch for Maybin to have some opportunities in this one, but I also think we'll hear Maurice Evans' name called more here since Maybin will likely see some double-teams on his side of the line. I agree Nirav that we'll likely see limited blitzing and a four-man rush most of the time, with Bradley hoping the front four can muster up some pressure.

McGuffie has good speed and evasiveness. He's tough so the linebackers have to sharp on identifying when he breaks into a gap because he can really pick up yardage quickly. I also think he'll be Threet's safety valve if things break down, so the backers can't just release him after he passes the line of scrimmage.

Special Teams:

ND: The Lions have shown that they have one of the best special teams units in the country. With Williams exploding on returns, Kevin Kelly hitting field goals from every distance, and Jeremy Boone being consistent, the Lions are truly making the special teams very special.

The Wolverines' struggles in the kicking game have been well documented. From having a kick blocked last season against Appalachian State to K.C. Lopata's miss from 26 yards that ended the game against Toledo, the Wolverines are clearly having issues. Lopata has only converted four of his seven attempts this year. On the other hand, punter Zoltan Mesko has been booming his punts with an average of 45.2 yards. If ever there was a statistic that illustrates how anemic the Wolverine offense has been, it's the number of times Mesko has had to punt. He's punted 39 times this season (or 6.5 punts per game). As a point of comparison, Boone has punted only 20 times.

Nathan Stupar (34) mae his presence known on special teams, helping to bottle up Badger return men deep in their own territory.

Harvey Levine/FightOnState.com

MH: As you said, special teams have lived up to their name. The coverage unit has been impressive, as has kicking and returns. They all need to be on in this one to force Michigan into some long field situations.

Matchup to Kick Back and Enjoy:

ND: If Graham (leg infection) is able to play this weekend, it'll make for a great matchup. Graham is leading the nation in TFLs and is making plays at the line of scrimmage for this Wolverine defense. We'll see how Dennis Landolt matches up with him. Landolt and the entire offensive line have been very effective but they have not faced a player on an opposing team that is as strong as Graham. It should be fun to watch.

MH: I am going with the Penn State front four, coming off their FOS Player of the Game performance versus Threet. If Threet can get comfortable, it'll give him consistency and confidence which will help U-M mount some drives. PSU's defense has to put him on edge and force some opportunities.

Keys to the Game:

ND: The key to this game is focus and execution. There is no way that the Wolverines should be in this game with the way that they are playing on both sides of the ball and the way that Penn State is playing. The Lions need to come out focused and execute to have this game over by halftime. The Lions could use this opportunity to get a little bit of rest for next week's game against Ohio State but they have to play up to their potential to earn that rest.

MH: I agree 100%. The Lions have to squarely focus on this game, and I think they are. If they execute and protect the ball they have a big opportunity to take a step closer to what they're eyeing.

Predictions:

ND: The Lions have a clear advantage in this game. Josh Gaines believes that the losing trend to the Wolverines has been mental. This is the week that the Lions come to grips with the past and dictate their own destiny. Lions roll.

Penn State 52 Michigan 7

MH: The Lions have the edge on paper, but I think Michigan comes out swinging to make a statement. In the end the talent, focus...oh and the crowd, help Penn State get the Wolverine, er, monkey off their back.
